

NON-DISCLOSURE AGREEMENT (NDA)

For the duration of this non-disclosure agreement, all information with which the Recipient may come into contact that is not in the public domain and is made available only through contact with the Owner will be considered confidential information.

This includes any information relating to suppliers, prices, products, technologies, software, etc.

The Recipient must use common judgment when deciding whether the information is confidential and above all must request the approval of the Owner before releasing any questionable information.

Privacy Protection

The Recipient understands that information deemed confidential is of value to the Owner and must keep all information at the same level of confidentiality as personal information.

Recipient agrees to retain all confidential information made available under standard non-disclosure terms and will not make such information available or disclose such information to third party suppliers or individuals without the Owner's prior written consent.

The Recipient must under no circumstances modify or copy the confidential information that is made available to them.

Report

This non-disclosure agreement will in no case serve as an agreement between the parties for employment.

The Recipient will remain as an individual contractor unless otherwise contracted directly by the Owner and will thus pay all federal and local taxes due for the money received.

User Licence

The Recipient will be allowed to use all information or products provided by the Owner strictly in the form in which such ownership is permitted.

Term

The obligations of this nondisclosure agreement will survive indefinitely, including through the termination or conclusion of this agreement.

Cession

The Parties agree to refrain from selling, transferring or delegating any provision of this agreement to third parties without the prior written consent of the respondent party.

Any third party entered into in this agreement will be bound by all terms and conditions contained in this agreement in this manner.
